1

`\hang`

This command indents the second and subsequent lines of a paragraph by `\parindent`, the paragraph indentation (p. '`\parindent`'). Since the first line is already indented by `\parindent` (unless you've cancelled the indentation with `\noindent`), the entire paragraph appears to be indented by `\parindent`.

Example:

```
\parindent=24pt \hang  ``I said you {\it looked} like an egg, Sir,'' Alice gently explained to Humpty Dumpty. ``And some eggs are very pretty, you know,'' she added.
```

produces:

> "I said you looked like an egg, Sir," Alice gently explained to Humpty Dumpty. "And some eggs are very pretty, you know," she added.